over the hills

I am a Canada-based photographer, filmmaker and writer known for my travel photography and photojournalism.

My greatest influences and inspirations have come from street photographers and photojournalists like Henri Cartier-Bresson and Robert Doisneau, Elliott Erwitt and Steve McCurry.

In “over the hills”, I showcase my journeys, both in photography and in my travels. The photographs are selected chronologically from my first trip to Australia and New Zealand in 2006, where I discovered my passion for photography, onto my latest trip in 2024 to France.

Over 18 years, the people and places in my photographs have changed. Some have stayed remarkably the same. Others have been affected by conflict and disaster. And I, too, have changed, both as a person and as a photographer.

In an age of technology and distraction, of relentless change and upheaval, I want my photographs to speak to the magic of the ordinary, the ephemeral beauty of everyday life, and timeless, universal experiences and emotions shared by all people around the world.

By being mindful of the people and places around us, we can experience a deeper empathy for humanity and a greater appreciation of life.
